BIG ORDERS.

Werner Company's Book Business Booming.

Every Day New Employees Are Given Places--Working Overtime.

Never within the history of the great institution has the volume of business been greater at the Werner company's plant than at the present time.

Never have more people been given employment; never have so many orders been booked ahead. Orders are being refused almost daily.

And this is not all holiday trade, either. If not a single order were booked within the next six months, the Werner company's plant would not of necessity decrease its force one man. For at present the order book is crowded, and six months' steady work would not completely clear it up. But other big orders come daily.

Every day new employees are given place, and every department from basement to attic is astir with the busy hum of industry.

The machinery in the factory is run many extra hours, and the packers and shippers can scarcely keep up with their work. Many of the shipments are retarded a day on account of physical inability to handle them. From three to five car loads of products leave the factory daily for all parts of the United States and Canada.

The pay roll at the plant was never so large as it is today, and when the whistle blows at noon Saturday, indicating the completion of another week's work, and the men and women file in ranks to the cashier's window, the scene is one full of significance. It indicates that hundreds of homes are supported and made bright and cheery by the existence of this industry; it indicates that the youth of this city have in the plant a source of remunerative occupation, and all along these lines the great force of the mammoth institution is keenly felt.

And another point, too--most vital to Akron. The policy of the Werner company is now to concentrate in this city all the most important departments and greatest forces. Akron is to be the central power, and here will be conducted the institution's greatest work.

Mass Meeting.

Italian Babies.

Babies seem to be no trouble in Italy, and one cannot but be struck by the number of them. These bambinos are often hung upon pegs in the front of the house, where they look out of their little black, beady eyes like paposes. I unhooked one of these babies once and held it awhile. Its back and little feet were held tightly against a strip of board so that it was quite stiff from its feet to its shoulders. It did not seem to object or to be at all uncomfortable, as it only howled while I was holding it. I have an idea that, except when invaded by foreigners, the bambino's existence is quite happy. Lillian Bell in Woman's Home Companion.

An Electric Dance.

Take a pane of glass--a broken one will do--and secure it by placing the ends between the leaves of two large books, letting the glass be two inches from the table. Cut from lightweight writing paper, or better still, from tissue paper, dolls, dogs and other figures. Place them on the table beneath the glass. Rub the glass vigorously with a silk handkerchief, and the figures will cut all kinds of antics.

According to Sire.

Like most orientals, the Chinese are apt to base their judgments upon externals. Captain Caspar F. Goodrich tells a story which points to this conclusion.

The captain is a very short, but very dignified man. Once when he was in a Chinese port, he went ashore to pay his respects to the prefect, who, being of the ruling Manchou race, was a much larger man than the ordinary run of Chinamen.

When Captain Goodrich rose to take his leave, the dignitary made a special effort to be polite. "Your excellency," said he, "I now see how you, though a little man, come to command a big warship. If you were only a little fatter, you would be an admiral."--Youth's Companion.
